AT HELPING HANDS EMERGENCY RESPONSE

We take the stress and concern out of
"what would happen if I couldn't get to the phone!"

When you experience a fall, heart attack, low blood sugar, or other emergency, every second counts! If you're home alone, any delay in medical care may jeopardize your chance for recovery and independence. At Helping Hands Emergency Response we provide greater independence and peace of mind, in the place that you feel most comfortable – your own home. Our Personal Emergency Response System (PERS) takes the stress and concern out of "what would happen if I physically couldn't get to the phone."

By using our PERS wrist band, pendant, or base station, you can be assured that at a press of the button a helping voice will immediately check on your status, and if required dispatch an EMT.

To find out more on how a Helping Hands Emergency Response System can make life easier, give us a call and ask one of our team members to explain more about our product and service, and how we can make life safer.
